

ANNEXURE 'D'

<https://mg.co.za/news/south-africa/2010-06-11-new-twist-in-lolly-killing/>

What is the relationship between Czech fugitive from justice Radovan Krejcir and senior crime intelligence officer Major-General Khanyisa “Joey” Mabasa?

Krejcir’s wife, Katarina, and Mabasa’s wife, Dorcas, established a company together last year, according to an investigation by the Mail & Guardian. Companies office records show that Katarina Krejcirova and Dorcas Mabasa became co-directors of a company called Radlochron in October 2009.

Joey Mabasa allegedly received a telephonic confession by former Krejcir employee George Smith after Smith had supposedly shot Lolly Jackson in May.

Krejcir, wanted in the Czech Republic and fighting a drawn-out battle to block his extradition, declined to comment. Mabasa said that he and his wife were separated “for the past 15 years”. But credit records for Khanyisa and Dorcas Mabasa show that they have both given the same home addresses for the past four years. They are both still reflected as owners of a house in Lenasia. Asked how his wife met Katarina Krejcirova, Mabasa said: “I don’t know.” But he confirmed that he was aware of her connection with Krejcirova after recently being approached by two journalists, who brought up the issue. He said he raised the matter with his wife last month, “the last time I saw her”.

“I told her that, because she still carries the same surname, I will be connected to what she does,” he said.

Mabasa claimed not to have Dorcas’s phone number, but when the M&G contacted her, she, without being told of the M&G’s conversation with her husband, said: “My husband and I are separated. He’s telling the truth that we are separated.”

She then terminated the conversation and could not be reached again.

At the time of the Jackson shooting, Mabasa told the M&G that Smith probably called him because Smith had been a police informant in a money-laundering investigation three years before. This came to an end when the police found Smith was a drug abuser.

“I don’t know why he called me,” Mabasa said, “I couldn’t even remember who he was.” But Smith was a key cog in the money-laundering operation allegedly involving Krejcir and Jackson and would have featured in any investigation of either man.

Mabasa and Smith allegedly agreed to meet at the Bedford Centre in Bedfordview. But Mabasa was delayed and, when the police arrived at the rendezvous, Smith was nowhere to be found. He is still missing and the police will not disclose any information on progress in the Jackson murder case.

However, intelligence sources have suggested that Krejcir has managed to sell himself — and buy protection — as an intelligence asset to crime intelligence and the South African Secret Service (Sass).